

Belle Isle State Park in the Northern Neck was the first park in Virginia to be purchased with funds from the 1992 Parks and Recreational facilities Bond. Its 733 acres contain seven miles of shoreline on the Rappahannock River and Mulberry and Deep Creeks. Here visitors can explore a wide variety of tidal wetlands interspersed with agricultural fields and upland forests.

The area has been inhabited for the past 11,000 years, first with the camps of native Americans visiting on a seasonal basis. Over time, Algonquian-speaking groups settled along the coast, on the banks of the major rivers. By the time the colonists arrived a Powhatan tribe, the Moraughtacunds, had established a village in the area in and around Belle Isle.

The Belle Isle neck soon began to be farmed as a plantation and passed through the hands of several families during colonial times. The land was sold in pieces after the Civil War, and Belle Isle seemed destined to become a waterfront subdivision until being purchased by the Commonwealth of Virginia in 1993.

Much of the park continues to be farmed today and is exemplary of conservation practices currently used by farmers to prevent run off pollution from flowing into the Chesapeake Bay.

Belle Isle hosts several miles of tranquil multi-use, hiking, biking and horse trails. Bikes, motorboats and canoes are available for rent. Three picnic shelters can be reserved in advance or are available on a first-come, first-served basis. While swimming isn't allowed, the park does allow excellent saltwater bank fishing.

Belle Isle offers a motorboat launch and a car-top launch providing access to some of the best fishing on the Rappahannock River. Croaker, spot, flounder and rockfish are found in the waters around Belle Isle State Park.

The Belle Isle Bel Air Overnight Area has two overnight facilities that can be rented together or separately. The Georgian-style Bel air mansion has a fully furnished kitchen, laundry room, dining room, library and five bedrooms. With its large bay and picture windows, the Bel Air Guest House offers unlimited breathtaking views of sunsets on the Rappahannock River.

The mansion can accommodate up to six over night guests and the guest house sleeps eight, but the park can accommodate larger, dayuse groups for meetings, retreats and special events.
